

The Lost Memoirs of Jane Austen

by Syrie James

Reading Group Guide

- 1) Why did the author choose to write the story in the first person, as Jane Austen's memoirs? Do you think the novel would have been as effective if written in the third person narrative? Did you find yourself connecting with Jane Austen because it was written from her perspective?
- 2) Consider the scene in the parlor in chapter two, and the exchange between Jane and Mrs. Austen which follows. How many key characters and plot elements are set up in that short space of time? How do the dialog and action serve to introduce each character? How do these two scenes set the tone of the novel, and lay a foundation for the rest of the story?
- 3) Which character archetypes do we see in The Lost Memoirs that are reflections of the archetypes in Jane Austen's novels?
- 4) When Jane meets Mr. Ashford, she feels she has written nothing new of value in nearly ten years, and has vowed to lay down her pen forever. Discuss the ways in which Mr. Ashford is influential in rekindling Jane's interest in writing, and how the ups and downs of Jane's relationship with him are interwoven into the plot of her revised version of Sense and Sensibility.
- 5) Why do you think Jane falls in love with Mr. Ashford? Name the qualities that make Mr. Ashford the ideal counterpart for Jane Austen, and worthy of her admiration and passion. Is his influence and encouragement the only reason she returns to writing? Or do you think he is merely the spark that ignites an already smoldering flame?
- 6) Compare and contrast the three offers of marriage Jane receives over the course of the book, and the men making the offers. Do you agree or disagree with Jane's decisions in each case? Discuss her reasons for initially accepting Harris Bigg-Wither, and then refusing him. How different would her life have been if she had married him? Do you think she would have ever written again? Was she selfish for having refused a life of comfort for her mother and sister in a time when there were not many options open to women?
- 7) Money, and the abundance or lack of it, was a prevailing theme in Jane Austen's work. In her unfinished novel, The Watsons, her heroine says: "Poverty is a great evil, but to a woman of education and feeling it ought not, it cannot be the greatest. I would rather be a teacher at a school (and I can think of nothing worse) than marry a man I did not like." Do you think this statement reveals Jane Austen's personal feelings? How is this theme expressed in The Lost Memoirs? Discuss the irony in Jane's final decision, where she refuses to marry a man she loves deeply, knowing that he will suffer the same fate that she has herself renounced.

- 8) Discuss other ways in which money affects the characters in The Lost Memoirs. How and why did the death of Mr. Austen change the financial status of Jane and her mother and sister? Mrs. Austen considered themselves poor with only £500 a year, yet they kept three servants. How does that reflect on the gentry class of that time? How do you think the very poor of the time lived? Discuss why servants were considered such a necessity in that era before modern conveniences, and what functions they were required to perform.
- 9) Jane decides to publish her novel anonymously partly because of her society's attitude towards the novel. Do you agree or disagree with her choice? How does their view of the novel compare to contemporary attitudes regarding popular entertainment, such as playing video games or watching television?
- 10) Discuss the pros and cons of primogeniture, which left all the land to the eldest son, and entail, which prevented the heir from dividing up the estate or selling any part of it. How did this enable the great landed families in 19th century England to maintain their wealth, status and power through the generations? In what way is Mr. Ashford an example of the sacrifices that were required along the way? Do you think the sacrifices were worth it?
- 11) Discuss the romantic moments in The Lost Memoirs. How does the author create and sustain sexual tension between the hero and heroine? How do the plot elements keep the story moving forward at a rapid pace?
- 12) Cassandra, shortly before she died, went through Jane's letters, burning most of them and cutting out portions of others, before sharing them with her family. These were personal letters in which Jane gave free vent to her feelings and observations of other people. Why do you think Cassandra did this? What do you think Cassandra might have been trying to hide?
- 13) Were you surprised when you learned Mr. Ashford's secret? Discuss what might have happened if he'd been honest with Jane from the start. What does Jane's returning all of his letters unopened say about her? Do you consider it justifiable, or a character flaw?
- 14) Consider the introduction of Isabella Churchill. How does the author establish her character traits and personality? How does Jane feel about Isabella, both before and after she learns the truth about her? In what ways does the Isabella storyline enhance the plot of The Lost Memoirs?
- 15) While reading The Lost Memoirs, did you learn anything new or surprising about Jane Austen's life, and/or the customs or social conventions during Jane Austen's era?

- 16) Jane's younger brother Edward was adopted at age sixteen by Mr. Thomas Knight II, from whom he inherited a fortune and three large estates. How do you feel about Mr. and Mrs. Austen's decision to allow their son's adoption? How did Edward's status as a wealthy landowner affect Jane's life, and contribute to her emergence as a novelist?
- 17) What was your perception of Jane Austen and her work before you read The Lost Memoirs? Do you feel the same or differently after reading the novel?
- 18) What are some of your favorite moments in the book?
- 19) How did your experience reading The Lost Memoirs compare to Jane Austen novels you have read? In what ways was it similar or different? If you are not familiar with Jane Austen's work, did The Lost Memoirs inspire you to read her novels? Why or why not?

A worthy attempt to augment Jane Austen's love life. Austen's short life is well documented by her surviving letters"except for the period 1809 through 1812, which preceded publication of her first novel, Sense and Sensibility. James re-imagines this time in the form of a "lost memoir" discovered in an attic chest, along with a gold-and-ruby ring. The "missing years" are emotionally and financially fraught for Jane. There's her first marriage proposal, from boorish, stammering Harris, the son and heir to the Bigg-Wither country estate. She accepts, seeing a means of procuring her mother's and sisters' security, but reneges the next day. Upon her father's death, Jane and the other distaff Austens must vacate their family home. Jane Austen has given up her writing when, on a fateful trip to Lyme, she meets the well-read and charming Mr. Ashford, a man who is her equal in intellect and temperament. Inspired by the people and places around her, and encouraged by his faith in her, Jane begins revising Sense and Sensibility, a book she began years earlier, hoping to be published at last. Syrie James is the USA Today bestselling author of the critically acclaimed Runaway Heiress; Nocturne; Dracula, My Love; The Secret Diaries of Charlotte Brontë; The Missing Manuscript of Jane Austen; Jane Austen's First Love; Forbidden; The Harrison Duet; and the international bestseller The Lost Memoirs of Jane Austen. - Jane Austen's Regency World Magazine. "Austen and Ashford seem a perfect match in matters of head and heart though she hews closely to the historic record, [James] creates...will-they-or-won't-they suspense that culminates with a proposal and an "intensely" kissed Austen. A pleasant addition to the ever-expanding Austen-revisited genre." - Publishers Weekly. "There are not enough accolades I could use to recommend this book ... Jane Austen comes alive from the first page to the last. You truly believe that you are reading her long-lost memoirs, not a historical fiction novel." -- diavasame.gr, Athens, Greece. "Rarely have I read a book that I enjoyed as much I honestly believe even Jane herself would have loved this book... To Jane Austen, with the greatest admiration, appreciation, and respect; To my agent Tamar Rydzinski, and my editor, Lucia Macro, whose dedication to and enthusiasm for this project cannot be measured; Thank you with all my heart. Although only one of the manuscripts has as yet been fully reviewed, they appear to be none other than Jane Austen's long-lost memoirs, relating stories and events that occurred either to the author herself or to her family members, friends, and acquaintances. Desiring no remunerary compensation for their find, the Chawton House Library graciously donated the chest and all its contents to the Jane Austen Literary Foundation for authentication and preservation.
