LEVANTINE CUISINE

As if we didn't have enough home schooling this week, we're going on a bit of a history lesson! Ever since working under Silvena Rowe, the authority on modern eastern Mediterranean cooking at The Mayfair Hotel, our Head Chef James has been captivated by the ancient region of the Levant. Embracing numerous cultures in the southeast corner of the Mediterranean, the area was known as the 'fertile crescent' and regarded as the cradle of civilisation; more than 10,000 years ago our ancestors started exploring agriculture and developed the use of irrigation. Cities and society followed, with Romans and Phoenicians enjoying socialising over dishes that still feature on menus today. Encompassing Lebanon, Israel, Palestine, Syria, Turkey, Egypt and Cyprus, the Levant cuisine presents us with invigorating, nutritious and intricate plates that have inspired this week's Super Club.

TO START

Fried Artichokes, Baba Ghanoush & Capers (vg, gf)

A celebration of native Mediterranean plants; the regal looking bud of a thistle - the artichoke, the aubergine and tahini Lebanese blend of Baba Ghanoush, along with capers; flower buds that are picked by hand each morning, dried in the hot Mediterranean sun and pickled.

MAIN COURSE

Shawarma Spiced Smoked Lamb Shoulder (gf)

A typical Middle Eastern dish of sliced meat seasoned with our special Shawarma rub before being smoked in-house.

- or -

Preserved Lemon & Coriander Falafel (vg, gf)

What is probably the oldest form of street food, with a debated (and quite political) history of its origin - it has been considered the national dish of Egypt, Palestine and Israel.

Both served with Tabbouleh & Fattoush Salads, Pomegranate Molasses, Tahini Sauce & Grilled Flatbread (vg)

Super fresh invigorating salads; parsley combined with bulgur wheat in the Tabbouleh and mixed greens with toasted pieces of flatbread in the Fattoush. Of course, we couldn't forget pomegranate, symbolic of love in many cultures. (All side dishes are gluten free apart from the Tabbouleh Salad).

SWEET

Butterless Baklava, Orange, Date, Pistachio & Almonds (vg, n)

*An ancient favourite of the Levant region with origins in the Ottoman Empire.
Layered filo pastry, filled with chopped nuts, and sweetened with honey.*

gf = gluten free, n = contains nuts, v = vegetarian, vg = vegan

THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL £9

Persepolis

Light Rum, Liqueure Strega, Rose Syrup, Lime garnished with Turkish Delight

Named after a ceremonial city in ancient Persia, this cocktail is an adaptation of a recipe created in 2018 by Sergio Leanza at Funkidory in Peckham. Sergio describes his drink as a Middle Eastern version of a Daiquiri.

Liqueure Strega is an Italian liqueur created in 1860 and is obtained by the distillation of about 70 herbs and spices from all over the world, each one with unique properties such as Ceylon cinnamon, Florentine iris, Italian Apennine juniper and Samnite mint.

Precious Saffron is added to the herb distillate which is then aged in ash barrels over a long period of time to ensure a perfect blending of the different aromas.
