All the themes we cover in Raising Girls book and talks, but more detailed about this age group. Growing up too fast is of course the big concern, and there is a really interesting quote right at the end. A girl wishing she had more family time and dad wasn't always at work! Kids do want their childhoods too. The media wants to take it away and sell them anxiety. But girls - and parents - are starting to fight back! And find purpose greater than fitting in or being cool! Body anxiety. Raising Girls: Helping Your Daughter to Grow Up Wise, Warm and Strong is a response to what Biddulph identifies as a "sudden and marked plunge in girls' mental health" over the past five years, years during which the growth of social media has encouraged anxiety and narcissism, childhood exposure to pornography has increased, and corporations have made millions from the pinkification of girlhood. "The world today does not seem to care about girls at it should, and sees them just as a way to make money." Biddulph is infuriated by Lego Friends, the girls' version of the toy launched last year ("Five curvy little friends who bake, home-make, decorate, hairstyle and shop! Anything gender limiting in that little selection?"). Steve w Steve Biddulph is a very successful Australian (Tasmanian) psychologist and author of parenting books, including The Secret of Happy Children, The New Manhood, Raising Boys (that has sold a million copies worldwide), and now Raising Girls.
