Comments and/or topics and questions for the thesis defence:

The thesis offers a detailed analytical comparison between the two Queens explored, in particular concerning similar critical moments in their personal love affairs or relationships with far-reaching consequences, in the case of the Queen of Scots eventually leading to the well-known tragic end. It is a very well-researched and documented piece of work with an independent discussion; the specific ideas could have perhaps been more clearly outlined in the introduction. The candidate provides a useful historical background; the following, major part focuses then on the unfortunate situations both the queens encountered but resolved differently, and this is truly the most competent part; finally, the candidate incorporates a decent study based on two historical novels by Jean Plaidy and Margaret George, who both concentrate on the portrayal of Mary Queen of Scots. The candidate employs a skilful academic language, however, with occasional minor inaccuracies (e.g. pp. 13, 19, 30, 39), and summarises her most significant findings in an excellent extensive conclusion.

to attain the academic degree of Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) in the Bachelor Program. International Business Administration Exchange. The relationship between employee-/production-centered leadership and work satisfaction. The present Bachelor Thesis is part of the research project "Interaction Between supervisors and subordinates" at the Berlin School of Economics and Law in cooperation with the University of Mannheim. Nine bachelor students participated in the project with each investigating a different leadership style in combination with other variables. The aim of this project was to collect a high amount of data from supervisors and their subordinates, asking different questions about leadership styles and the relationship towards each other. The Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) is the most common undergraduate degree offered by universities and colleges worldwide. B.A. degrees are mainly awarded to students following a programme in the Liberal Arts (e.g. Humanities, Social Sciences). Traditional universities such as Cambridge and Oxford award the Bachelor of Arts degree to all their subjects, including the scientific ones. The study duration of a B.A. degree is three to four years. While the Bachelor of Science focuses on research and mathematical skills, the B.A. degree develops students' abilities to communicate clearly and critically analyse ideas, theories, and concepts. Students learn how to reach their own conclusions and express them logically. During the final year, you have to write a thesis in order to graduate.
